Sailmakers, shipbuilders, and ship owners of Thomaston, Maine

This collection contains the business records and vessel papers of the Dunn & Elliot firm of Thomaston, Maine. The firm began as a sailmaking partnership between Thomas W. Dunn and his cousin, George W. Elliot, then expanded to include a shipyard. Dunn & Elliot also managed the vessels they built, almost all of which were coasting schooners trading locally or down the Atlantic coast to the West Indies. The collection contains bills and correspondence from the sailmaking business as well as records of ownership, construction, insurance, accounts, correspondence, and other material from vessels managed by the firm.

Bequest of Captain W.J. Lewis Parker. Smaller groups of material donated by Eleanor Houston Smith, Charles E. Burden and Douglas W. Hawes, and purchased by the museum in 1987 and 2018.

Acquisition

In 1965, the contents of the Dunn & Elliot sail loft were sold at auction by the remaining family heirs. The company's papers were divided into lots and purchased by multiple buyers. While Maine Maritime Museum did purchase a number of sail plans and other artifacts at that auction, the manuscript material here has been re-assembled from multiple donors over time.

The bulk of this collection was given to Maine Maritime Museum by the estate of Captain William J. Lewis Parker in 2006 (2006.87). Captain Parker had an active research interest in Dunn & Elliot and collected many batches of material as they became available. Eleanor Houston Smith and Douglas W. Hawes donated account books in 1966 and 1990, respectively, and Dr. Charles E. Burden donated a small group of papers in 2006. The remaining parts of the collection were purchased by the museum from Ryan Cooper of Limerick, Maine in 1987 and The Book Barn of Wells, Maine in 2018.

Restrictions

There are no restrictions on this collection.

Physical Condition

The papers are in good condition apart from normal wear. Some tears have been mended with archival document repair tape. All fasteners have been removed and replaced with plastic paper clips.

Processing Notes

Some of the smaller accessions were not fully integrated into this collection, but have been placed in polyester sleeves to differentiate accession groups. Please ask for assistance if you need to remove these items from their sleeves.

Captain W.J. Lewis Parker used his portion of the collection to do extensive research into Dunn & Elliot, and some of his handwritten notes can be seen in the margins of these papers. As part of the research process, many envelopes were separated from the letters they contained; these envelopes are now at the end of Series I. Parker did donate four original file boxes from the Dunn & Elliot loft containing invoices, trip statements, documents, and letters organized chronologically and then alphabetically. It is possible that these represented Dunn & Elliot's original filing order.

One anomaly is the presence of a handful of papers from the Hatch family of Nobleboro, Maine. There is no identified connection between the Hatch family and Dunn & Elliot. However, as the materials arrived with the Dunn & Elliot papers from two different sources, they have been left here.

Related Materials

The sail plans and artifacts purchased from the Dunn & Elliot sail loft are listed in Appendix E. Most of the sail plans are for vessels built and operated by Chapman & Flint. Sail plans are located in drawers 71 and 72 in the Plans Room. Please inquire for more information.

There is also more material on the schooner Abbie Bowker in MS-13. This covers the vessel's construction in Phippsburg, Maine by Timothy B. Bowker and the first ten years of her operation, when she was managed by Charles V. Minott.

Additionally, a solitary receipt for cordage from J.T. Donnell & Co. has been filed as SM 169/45.

Historical Note

Dunn & Elliot was a sailmaking, shipbuilding, and ship management firm that operated in Thomaston, Maine, from 1865 to the 1920s. The firm principally built and managed coasting schooners, though the sail loft built sails for a wide variety of Thomaston vessels.

The name Dunn & Elliot first appeared in 1865, when Thomas W. Dunn (1821-1904) and his cousin George Elliot (1839-1918) formed a partnership and opened a sail loft on O'Brien's wharf. The firm prospered with Thomaston's maritime industry. The sail loft had an especially close relationship with the Chapman & Flint shipping empire, in which Dunn & Elliot received a share of each Chapman & Flint vessel in exchange for making and repairing the sails for the firm's square-rigged Cape Horn fleet. (Chapman & Flint operated a shipyard in Thomaston until 1868, when they relocated to Bath.) The loft continued to prosper as shipping declined around the turn of the twentieth century, taking over the business of other sailmakers as they retired or quit the industry.

At the same time that they were starting their own sail loft, Thomas W. Dunn and George Elliot also became partners in a new shipyard run by their cousin, Edwin Walsh (c. 1837-1898). This shipyard operated as E. Walsh & Co., T.W. Dunn & Co., and Walker, Dunn & Co. before being formally combined with Dunn & Elliot in 1880. The two firms had a close relationship from the beginning, however, as Dunn & Elliot managed the shipyard's vessels and built sails for the fleet.

Dunn & Elliot specialized in building schooners for the coasting trade. Their vessels carried ice, coal, lime, granite, lumber, sugar, and salt along the Atlantic coast and to the West Indies, with the occasional transatlantic passage. As managing owners, Dunn & Elliot kept track of all of this business. Most of their vessels were moderately sized, though the fleet grew steadily from the 300 ton, two-masted schooners built in the 1860s to the 1,000-ton, four-masted schooners of the 1890s.

Richard E. Dunn and Richard O. Elliot, sons of Thomas W. Dunn and George Elliot, both joined the firm in 1902. Aware that shipping was in decline, they acquired the Burgess & O'Brien store, wharf, and coal business in 1913 and began to focus on importing fuel. They did re-open the shipyard during World War I to build four schooners for the war effort. The last of these, the five-masted Edna Hoyt, was launched in 1920. After that, Dunn & Elliot gradually divested their remaining maritime business and operated solely as a fuel company until about 1970.

Scope and Content Note

This collection is divided into four series: I. Dunn & Elliot Company Records; II. Dunn & Elliot Vessel Records; III. Other Vessel Records; IV. Hatch Family Papers.

Series I: Company Records contains records from the firm's sail loft, shipyard, and general operations. These include correspondence, insurance papers, contracts, bills and accounts, ledgers, and labor records. Records from specific vessels in the Dunn & Elliot fleet are filed in Series II, though bills referencing more than one vessel may be filed here.

This series contains most of the surviving material from the Dunn & Elliot sail loft. There are account books that list sail measurements and construction costs, receipts for bulk orders of sailcloth and other materials, and detailed correspondence with Chapman & Flint regarding sail orders for their Cape Horn fleet. Series I also includes account books from the 1850s, incoming correspondence about the firm's general business, and workman's time books dating from 1874 to 1923.

Series II: Vessel Records comprises the bulk of the collection. It contains records of the construction and operation of most of the vessels that were built by Dunn & Elliot, organized alphabetically by vessel name. These may include records of ownership, insurance, and registration, bills and accounts for construction costs, port expenses and crew wages, correspondence with captains, and, occasionally, log-books or protests over damaged cargo. Though these records are often incomplete, they provide a detailed picture of the Dunn & Elliot fleet's participation in the coasting trade.

Series III: Other Vessel Records contains papers from vessels in which Dunn & Elliot had an interest or which they purchased and managed after the vessel was launched. Record types are similar to those in Series II, though are often scantier. Vessels here include the Abbie Bowker (three-mast schooner), built by Timothy B. Bowker of Phippsburg, and the Ella F. Crowell (two-mast schooner) and James A. Brown (two-mast schooner), both (at least nominally) owned by Burgess & O'Brien of Thomaston.

Series IV: Hatch Family Papers consists of a single folder with a few notes from or for Zaccheus Hatch, Frederick Hatch, Jr., or Lot Hatch of Nobleboro, Maine regarding business in town. None of these have an identified connection to Dunn & Elliot.
